SOLUTION OF POINT RAISED BY JAPANESE HELD REMOTE

Tokio Envoys Cannot Give Way Now, Belief

CONFERENCE ON

France, Britain And Italy Participate In Discussion

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, Sept. 29.—The sub-commission headed by Sir Littleton Groom (Australia), which is dealing with Mr. Adatchi's amendment, did not meet this morning, but Mr. Adatchi had informal conversations with several members of the committee.

Hitherto, a solution seems remote. Many consider it difficult, if not impossible, for the Japanese to give way.

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, Sept. 29.—The Japanese difficulty as regards the Disarmament Protocol is now being examined by a small committee of delegates of Britain, France, Italy and Japan.

The matter is engrossing attention here.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 29.—Commenting on what it terms Japan's impossible demand, the Daily News says that the amendment seriously challenges the existence of the protocol. The admission of the League's right to interfere with the internal affairs of a nation will lead to hopeless confusion, and probably the break up of the League itself. Japan is obviously out to wreck the United States because of the new American immigration laws. The acceptance of Japan's proposal will definitely and finally estrange America from the League of Nations.

An American message from Washington says that the immigration exclusion policy is regarded as being a purely domestic issue. Officials are closely watching Geneva. It is believed that Japan's activity is not aimed solely at the United States.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Sept. 29.—The Government has authorised the French Delegation at Geneva to sign the Disarmament Protocol with reservations in the event of delay in calling the proposed conference in connection therewith.

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, Sept. 30.—A serious deadlock was apparently reached in the drafting of the protocol. A small committee of jurists, on which Britain, France, Italy and Japan are represented, is discussing the question of a formula with a view to a solution.

It is understood that Mr Adatchi persists in his point of view.

The British Dominions representatives oppose the Japanese Amendment because they consider that Japan should not be excluded from being declared the aggressor if she attack another State on a domestic matter, which is, they contend, what the amendment means. They are of opinion that abuse of domestic laws should be amenable to settlement without recourse to aggression.

It is pointed out that acceptance of the Japanese amendment would close the door absolutely to the entry of the United States into the League of Nations.

It is at present uncertain whether there will be a meeting of the subcommittee today.

Germany Hands In League Entry Note

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 29.—The German memorandum in which the wishes and conditions of Germany for her entry into the League of Nations are laid down was today handed to M. Herriot in Paris and Mr. MacDonald in London.

Chekiang Preparing For Attack Near Sungkiang

Sungkiang, Chekiang Province, Sept. 27.—The Chekiang force are entrenching on a great scale to the west of Sungkiang and are impressing coolies and about everybody else in the labor. If a battle develops here the line will be just to the east of the long bridge not far from Shih-hutang, and will be about five miles from Sungkiang. The bridge has already been made impassable for locomotives and cars.

The city of Sungkiang itself is under more excitement than at any time since the war between Kiangsu and Chekiang began. The military has not stopped with the impressment of coolies but is now invading other classes. One of the teachers in the foreign mission school was seized at the door of his home and had not one of the men from the yamen recognised him, he would have been put to work along with the coolies. Your correspondent saw a bunch of coolies being marched along after having been brought here by train. They were marching along the road in charge of the police and had their hands tied together as though they were ordinary prisoners. This doubtless is due to the fact that the coolies have a very strong aversion to this war work and have been known to make a break for liberty.

There is a general feeling of gloom and uncertainty and very few of the shops are open for trade. An airplane passed over yesterday going in the general direction of Fungchng and after a short time returned and disappeared in the direction of Lunghwa. It was probably reconnoitring for the Chekiang forces.

Later (September 29): Although the police department here insists that no fighting has taken place on this front I saw one wounded soldier being carried and another walking along the street. I was told that they had been wounded at Bridge No 34 and if there has been no fighting here these men must have been wounded by some advance guard sent ahead to investigate. Bridge No. 31 is to be the second line of defense and if no stand is made there the lines doubtless will be withdrawn to Sungkiang itself. However we are expecting an engagement any day now in the vicinity of Bridge No. 34.

In some way the report got out that cannon were to be placed on the top of the large three storied building with a roof garden that is being built here by a Mr. Han. I do not know why it should have so disturbed them, but not even the sound of cannon firing, which excited them a good bit, seemed to produce the effect of this piece of news. Very few shops are opened now and by six o'clock practically all of them are closed up through fear of the soldiers and fear of being impressed is largely responsible for this. Everyone seems to be in a panic.

It seems that numbers who have run to the country for safety have not found it. One lady who took her mother out to a place about four miles from here was back yesterday inquiring if I had a plan whereby she could get her back here, as the soldiers were making themselves rather a nuisance in her neighborhood. A gentleman was in from a little place a few miles to the south of us and reports that the robbers are making themselves unpleasant. He said that he had gotten them to form a guard for protection at night. I asked him how he got guns. He said that they did not have any guns, but that they had swords and whistles. They would make a circuit of the place and blow a whistle now and then and shoot off a firecracker to make evil-minded men think that they had fire arms. We are thankful that the trains keep running pretty regularly and that we get daily news from the outside world.

Gen. Wang Ping has taken up his residence here and is now in full charge of this part of the country. He has gotten out a proclamation trying to make the people feel easy and telling the shopmen to open their shops and do business. He promises that soldiers shall not use high-handed methods. If he is just able to keep the Fukien troops away from here, he may be able to pacify the people.

ROTARIANS WILL HEAR M. HENRI, LABOR EXPERT

Commissioner Of International Labor Office To Be Guest At Weekly Meeting

M. Pierre Henri, Special Commissioner of the International Labor Office of the League of Nations, will be the principal speaker at the weekly meeting of the Shanghai Rotary Club on Thursday afternoon at 12.30 o'clock at the Astor House.

M. Henri was the guest of honor at a tiffin given yesterday at the Great Eastern Hotel by the National Committee, Y. M. C. A., the National Committee, Y. W. C. A., the National Christian Council and a number of representative journalists.

Mr. M. T. Tchou presided. Speeches of welcome were delivered by Mr. C. E. Patton, Miss Shen Ta-king and Mr. Jabin Hsu on behalf of their organisations.

M. Henri gave a description of the organisation of the International Labor Office and pointed out the importance of co-operating with China in solving labor problems. He urged that organisations for both employers and employees send delegates to the annual conference in Geneva so that the work of solving the intricate problem might be co-ordinated.

M. Henri will stay in Shanghai for about three weeks and then proceed to Peking, visiting all the big industrial centers including Tsingtao, Tientsin, Tsinan, Chu Fu, Chengchow and come back here by way of the Yangtse ports. He will then go to Canton to investigate conditions there before continuing his journey to Hongkong and Siam.

BRUTAL ATTACK ON FOREIGNERS NEAR TIENTSIN

Secretary Of Race Club And Woman Companion Are Assaulted

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tientsin, Sept. 30.—Mr. R. P. Sanderson, the secretary of the Tientsin Race Club, and Miss Davenport, the matron of the Victoria Hospital, were brutally assaulted last night by five coolies when motoring on the outskirts of Tientsin. The attackers fled on the approach of another car. Both Mr. Sanderson and Miss Davenport were taken to hospital in a serious condition. The former was slashed by reaping-hooks.

FIGHTING ON LARGE SCALE REPORTED AT SHANHAIKUAN

Sound Of Field-Guns And Rifles Plainly Heard

AIRPLANES USED

Chihli Troops Have Not Yet Crossed Great Wall

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, September 29.—Advices from Shanhaikwan of today's date report that the sound of field-guns and rifles began to be heard early this morning and that several aeroplanes are seen in the air. It is generally believed that fighting has actually taken place on a large scale between the Chihli and Fengtien troops in the vicinity of Shanhaikwan.

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, September 29.—It is authoritatively reported that the Fengtien troops, on the 26th instant, carried out reconnaissance in force in the area of Shanhaikuan and that the 2nd and 3rd armies of the Chihli troops have not yet crossed the Great Wall.

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Sept. 29.—According to a special despatch from Lanchow dated September 28, those military trains which have passed through Tanshan station for the past fortnight since the commencement of transportation to the fronts of the Chihli forces, have amounted to 150 in number, the average of soldiers aboard each of the trains being figured as 500.

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, Sept. 26.—The native press states that a telegram has reached the headquarters of Marshal Wu Pei-fu from Military Governor Yen of Shansi offering 10,000 soldiers for the punitive expedition. The province will also contribute 1,000,000 rounds of ammunition. This offer is said to have been accepted.

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, Sept. 26.—A Peking telegram says that the Chinese cruisers, Hai Chi and Shao Wo have arrived at Chinwangtao.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Mukden, September 30.—The Fifth Army, under General Wu Kuang-hsin, occupied Kiengping yesterday.

(Eastern News Agency)

Mukden, Sept. 30.—According to an announcement made today by the General Headquarters of the Fengtien troops, General Pen Shou-shin, Commander-in-Chief of the First Chihli Army, was killed by a bomb thrown down by a Fengtien airplane on the 26th instant while he was forming a plan of operations at the headquarters of the 15th Chihli Division at Shanhaikwan, but his remains have been secretly taken to Peking for fear lest his death should demoralise all the Chihli troops.

(Eastern News Agency)

Mukden, Sept. 30.—The Fengtien military authorities, with a view to prohibiting officers and men of the Fengtien troops from reading newspapers or correspondence concerning the war for fear they should mutiny and the minds of the populace residing in the war districts west of Mukden should be agitated, have decided to suspend the dispatch by mail of newspapers for the districts abovementioned, and have at the same time begun to examine mail matter.

PEKING FEELS PINCH OF WAR; SILVER SCARCE

Prices Of Necessities Soar And Value Of Coppers Slumps Heavily

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Sept. 29.—Since the outbreak of hostilities between Chihli and Fengtien, railway traffic has become completely suspended, and also the supply of goods from local districts cut off owing to the compulsory enlistment of coolies as well as the commandeering of carriages.

In consequence, prices of daily necessities have suddenly gone up, thus menacing the living not only of the lower-classes but also of the bourgeoisie in the capital.

To make matters worse, while coppers are being coined excessively, certain Chinese circles have begun buying silver-dollars with the consequence that silver-dollars have become scarce in the market, causing a heavy fall in the value of coppers. The quotation of coppers is now standing at over 300 for one silver-dollar as against about 230 for one silver-dollar, which was quoted in pre-war days.

Marshal Wu Pei-fu has today given instructions to the Ministry of Finance and all Departments concerned to hold a meeting to devise measures for the relief of the impoverished people by regulating prices of commodities and preventing excessive profits by crafty merchants.

Chekiang Gains Slightly In Fifty-Hour Battle On Kiating-Huangtu Sector

Heaviest Attack Yet Staged By Kiangsu Is Beaten Off By Defending Force; Reports From Sunkiang Show Swift Advance By Fukienese

BY TALBOT PATRICK

After one more attack in which the Kiangsu forces pushed forward between Huangtu railway station and Huangtu village on Soochow Creek and were driven back by Chekiang reserves gathered from the clusters of houses scattered about the countryside, the battle on the Kiating-Huangtu front yesterday dropped away into long distance rifle fire, varied by occasional shots from field pieces or parts of belts of machine gun ammunition.

The close of the fifty-odd hours of fighting showed Chekiang with a slight gain, a straightening of the line between Kiating and Huangtu, and the added power to say that the heaviest and largest scale attack yet staged by the Kiangsu army had been beaten off.

Reports from the south, along the Shanghai-Hangchow Railway line, were not as rosy. Monday night the second span of bridge No. 34 was declared blown up. This is the bridge where Dr. T. S. K. Loh, chief secretary to General Ho Feng-lin, said the Chekiang front line would run. Yesterday it was learned that the skirmishers of General Sun's Fukien army advanced more rapidly than was expected and reached the bridge before a heavy force of Chekiang men had been placed there. As a result, two Chekiang bridge guards were shot and the ruins of the structure were taken possession of by the southern advance.

The position of the Chekiang front line in this sector is now expected to be between Sungkiang and bridge 34, possibly at bridge 31. The Sungkiang commander, who had the rails and sleepers at the latter bridge pulled up several days ago, yesterday had them laid loosely and a light engine and car run across to bring back some supplies.

FIRST IN KIATING

My first visit to Kiating, staged yesterday, showed at once that this town is a real stronghold. It is a town of eighty thousand, at a guess, and surrounded by a wall which also takes in a good bit of open land. The wall consists of a thick earthen embankment topped by a crenellated wall of stone and brick and is a real fortification for the types of armament in use by the present forces.

Many people are still living there, although shops are open only in the early morning, but despite their number a record is kept of every person admitted and allowed to leave the town. Through the officer in charge of this record I learned I was the first correspondent to visit the place, a statement borne out by the warmth of the welcome accorded by General Yang Ho-tsao. I was taken to a place on the walls from which Kiangsu men were only about four hundred yards distant and also viewed modern field guns emplaced on the ancient wall. In the recent heavy fighting, the town was engaged on three sides, only the south gate remaining open. The big, iron covered doors in the other gateways are kept closed and in time of danger are barred with logs.

The town is tied up in the network of field telephone lines which has been spread thickly all along the Chekiang front and following the greater number of parallel lines leads one to the headquarters. On the way I noticed coffins made of rough, first boards, with none of the curved grace of those seen on other parts of the front, including the filled ones I noted yesterday at Malu village.

Which reminds me that the fire at first believed to be part of Kiating was a village or cluster of houses in [illegible] set on fire by Kiangsu shells.

LEADER KILLED

The fighting line now extends about two miles in front of Malu, although intrenchments thrown up opposite bridges over the creek

BRITISH TRADE ASKS VOICE ON BOXER SCHEMES

Views Of Federation Regarding Disposal Of Funds Undergo Change

(Reuter's Service)

London, September 29.—The Federation of British Industries today issued a statement asking the Government to adhere to the undertaking of their predecessors that industry would be represented in the committee established to decide the purpose to which the British share of the Boxer Indemnity should be put.

Although the Federation had originally advocated that the money should be spent for educational purposes it had now modified its views after consultation with responsible Chinese public men and, in agreement with public opinion in China, the Federation now considered the education of Chinese students on Western lines a debatable matter. In the present state of China, students highly trained technically found no opportunities of utilising their training in China and this inevitably bred discontent.

JAPANESE GUARD SCUFFLES WITH CHIHLI TROOPS

Disturbance Takes Place At Lanchow After Alleged Insult

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Sept. 29.—A scuffle took place at Lanchow station yesterday between a Japanese sentry there and a number of Chinese soldiers, the cause being, it is alleged, an insult given to the former by the latter. The Japanese, reinforced by his comrades, however, drove off the Chinese soldiers. The Commandant of the Japanese Garrison has immediately opened negotiations with Chinese authorities concerned in this connection.

SETTLEMENT IS WORKED OUT IN N.Y.K. DISPUTE

Employes Agree To Return To Work And Withdraw Resignations

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, Sept. 30.—The Nippon Yusen Kaisha dispute has been settled.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

The Nippon Yusen Kaisha proposal to withdraw resignations has been endorsed by both parties.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, Sept. 30.—The report that a final settlement of the N.Y.K. dispute had been reached is stated to be premature, though it is true that the mediators for the company and the representatives of the dissatisfied employes reached an agreement whereby the latter consented to withdraw their resignations on conditions including equal treatment for the land and marine staffs, recognition by the company of the principles set forth in the demands of those who resigned, and the disbandment of all employees' associations except those for scientific purposes.

While it is expected that these terms will be accepted when they are presented to the company today, it is indicated that some of the employes who resigned disapprove of the action of their representatives as the terms include temporary postponement of the questions of reinstatement of those employes who were dismissed in connection with the employes' first petition to the company, and the future position of the President, whose resignation was demanded in the petition.

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, September 30.—Acting on the advice by four of the directors of the N. Y. K. those employes, who have tendered their resignations, have decided to withdraw them unconditionally.

RECORD CASUALTIES ARE INFLICTED AS GUNS PLAY HAVOC ON ALL FRONTS

One Colonel Killed On Each Side On Huangtu-Malu Sector; Liuho Quiet Again; Lunghua Claims More War Prisoners; Defence Of Sunkiang Strengthened; Ho Feng-lin Orders Levy On Rice

Repeated severe engagements along the Kiating-Huangtu front took place yesterday with many casualties on both sides. Liuho was quiet.

Kiangsu's heavy artillery fire and Chekiang's efficient use of the hand grenade and bayonets of the rifles resulted in the terrible loss of life on the field of battle.

Chekiang advanced about two li in the Kiating sector and held their position yesterday, according to Lunghua headquarters.

At other points, the battle seesawed.

Colonel Wang Shu-ping, in command of the second regiment of the sixth mixed brigade, died of wounds yesterday. He was shot in the chest on Monday in the drive on the Malu sector.

On the Kiangsu side, Colonel Wu of the Hupeh reinforcement, was killed in action in the same battle.

A report received yesterday morning by General Ho Feng-lin from Nanziang states that 90 prisoners, 60 rifles, two machine guns and large quantities of ammunition were captured on Monday night.

The Chekiang forces in Fangtai have dug in and are facing the Hupeh troops, under Brigadier-Generals Liu Tsu-lung and Chang Yung-ming.

Another Kiangsu spy in bogus Red Cross uniform was captured in Liuho yesterday. Arms were discovered on the person of the secret service man. Dr. B. Y. Wong of the Shanghai Red Cross was sent for following the capture and he found that the man did not belong to any of the society's branches, nor did [illegible] the proper insignia [illegible] Cross omcer. He was brought back to Shanghai for examination and confinement. Residents of Liuho say that the man had been extorting money from them under the pretext of soliciting for Red Cross subscriptions.

A Kashing report states that Chang Kuo-wei the commander of the artillery regiment of the first Chekiang division who fired upon his own men in the retreat from the Fukien border, has arrived in Kashing with his Japanese wife and has been appointed Military Commissioner of Kashing and Wuchow, by the Peking Government.

Kiangsu forces resumed their attack on Kiating yesterday morning. Fighting continued all day yesterday without much difference in the battle. General Yang-Hua-chao was personally supervising the combat.

From Malu, the Chekiang men assaulted yesterday morning at 3 o'clock. Colonel Chang Han-ching was injured slightly in the foot, but remained at his post after being bandaged.

Much attention has been given by General Lu Yung-hsiang to the Sungkiang sector in anticipation of an assault by Sun Chuan-fang and Chen Tiao-yuan. The first line of defence at Bridge 34 is manned by one battalion of Yang Hua-chao's seasoned Fukien veterans with a number of field pieces. The second line of defence is at Bridge Number 31 to be guarded by the forces of General Wang Ping with four machine guns. This is only four miles from Sungkiang, were heavy forces are stationed and could be drawn at a moment's notice. Trenches have been dug along the banks of Shihhutang.

To raise funds for military expense, General Ho Feng-lin yesterday issued proclamation legalising the levy of one dollar each on every picul of rice imported into Shanghai. From today, no rice could be imported without a Huchao or licence and the charge will be a dollar for every 200 catties of the cereal.

One hundred and thirty-three wounded were sent back from the front line yesterday and distributed among the 12 Red Cross Hospitals here, according to the nightly bulletin issued by Dr. W. S. New, Field Director of the Red Cross yesterday. Of these more than 40 were seriously wounded and six of them died in the course of the day. All the wounded were brought back from the Huangtu-Kiating front.

Yesterday's batch brings the total number of wounded being taken care of by the local Red Cross Hospitals to 1,200, which is the possible capacity of the 12 hospitals now organised. Dr. New will assign one or more hospitals for the work.

CHI APPLIES LONG RANGE GUN UPON LIUHO TELLINGLY

Chekiang Rifle Fire However Does Much Damage To Invaders

BY D. J. LEWIS

Lootien, September 30, 8.00 p.m.—Liuho is still hard pressed on three sides by the Kiangsu forces, the Kiangsu attack which commenced at 4 p.m. on the 29th still continuing. To counteract the effect of the heavy Kiangsu reinforcements the Chekiang forces have increased their artillery complement and have shelled the Kiangsu lines heavily during the day. Fierce attacks are being made by the Kiangsu left wing at Zu Kie Chiao six li from Liuho in an endeavor to cut the road. It is claimed that the Kiangsu heavy guns have considerably longer range than those used by Chekiang. Considerable shrapnel is being used by Kiangsu [illegible] to the Chekiang command who report that as a result of one shot ten Chekiang soldiers quartered at Liuho were wounded.

From information received it is apparent that Chekiang is still holding fast to their defensive attitude on the Liuho sector. Fighting continues in the town and it is quite possible that a portion of the town is now occupied by Kiangsu forces.

A Chekiang areoplane flew over Lootien in the direction of Kating at 10.30 this morning.

The Chekiang forces are apparently making extensive use of rifle fire. A shipment of 300 rifles to replace the ones that have become useless was despatched to Liuho this afternoon.

About forty cars are in commission and it is reported that the chauffeurs are quite content with their monthly stipend of Mex $100.

Col. Chang Yi-sheng and his troops of the 1st Regiment, 24th Mixed Brigade are still at Liuho. No new troops were sent up to Liuho today. There were no indications of any serious set back in this sector either from the direction of Liuho or Kating.

In an interview with Judge T. S. K. Loh, Chief Secretary to General Ho Feng-lin, late yesterday he stated that firing had continued during the entire night (September 29) along the entire front between Luiho and Hwangtu, the former sector being comparatively less serious. Kiangsu is using more artillery than rifles. The casualties on the enemy side according to Dr. Loh are very heavy, but the number of Chekiang wounded are also large including a few officers. About ninty enemy soldiers have been made prisoner, and 60 rifles and 2 machine guns have been captured. Dr. Loh states that the Chekiang forces are still firmly holding their position.

It is understood that due to the present state of emergency the French authorities have armed some of the Russian Cadets, a large party of whom were seen yesterday marching through the French Concession armed with rifles.

At 8 p.m. the flashes of the heavy guns in the vicinity of Kiating could be plainly seen at Lootien.

CEYLON OFFERS SLIM PICKINGS TO FEMALE PAIR

'Mother And Daughter' Recent Shanghai Visitors, Given Cool Reception

Light lady fingers do not appeal to the taste of dwellers in Colombo, apparently—at least not enough to interfere with their digestion. The trail of the famous mother and daughter whose adventures in love and finance in Shanghai enriched them in proportion as they impoverished their benefactors, has begun to be rather bleak, most of the "fall guys" in that part of the country, evidently, having been put on their guard by advance reports of the interesting doings of these interesting persons.

The Times of Ceylon of August 12 says:—

"There arrived in Colombo a fortnight ago from the Far East a Dollar line vessel. Among the passengers who disembarked at Colombo were an American lady and her daughter. They proceeded to a leading hotel and allowed it to be known that they were the 'wife and daughter of' a millionaire.' Unfortunately, they had lost all their ready money in Java, but remittances would reach them by the end of this week. They engaged a car to Kandy, had a thoroughly good time, and then returned to Colombo. 'The lack of ready money owing to their losses in Java, however, was embarrassing them severely, and in their distress they turned to the Colombo jewellers—individuals notoriously ready to hood-wink—and endeavored to borrow money on their personal effects. A loan of a hundred rupees, they told one well-known firm, would be repaid with fifty percent interest the next day. There was nothing doing, but another jeweller took compassion on them and lent them £12 on a set of dressing table appointments—a silver manicure set, hair brushes, etc. On these articles there was engraved a coronet, and beneath it a shield with a small device in the center.

"Then, however, came the fall. Rumors began to circulate. They left the hotel at which they were staying and the motor car in which they had hired [illegible] suspicious. So suspicious, indeed, that when he heard that they had booked a passage on a vessel leaving yesterday, he hurried to a magistrate, obtained a warrant, and the last hour the American millionairess and her daughter spent in Colombo could not have been to their liking. Shortly before the vessel sailed, police officers went on board, and brought the ladies ashore. "The only complaint against them officially was the debt to the motor car owner. This they offered to compromise for Rs. 15 and a shawl which they said had cost a thousand dollars in Brussels. Probably realising it was all he would get, the motor car hirer thought it was better than nothing and took it, with the result that Colombo lost two visitors who, had they stayed longer would almost certainly have been amusing, if expensive. During their brief career here there is every reason to believe that they imposed on a number of people. Only two are likely to see any more of their money—the motor car hirer, who has the shawl, and the jeweller, who has the dressing table appointments. 'If anyone likes to offer half a thousand dollars for the shawl—which incidentally had been previously offered to a well-known shipping man in return for a passage—he will probably get it quickly, but the jeweller, apparently, thinks he got good value for his money.

"There are several good tales in connection with their doings locally which unfortunately cannot be told. For instance, the story of how they booked their passages would make interesting reading. But if anyone wants the address of the ladies there is their own authority for stating that for the next few months it will be Portland Square, London."

"THERE'S ALWAYS HOPE," SAYS MARY MOORE, WHO DIED SIX DEATHS.

Miss Mary Moore

Three years ago, Mary Moore had already achieved stardom with William Faversham and Lou Tellegen, and her stage future was bright. Then she was terribly injured in an automobile accident on Long Island, and surgeons frankly told her she would die. Her neck was broken in two places, her skull was fractured four different times and other bones were broken. She was a mangled mass. Steadfastly refusing to die, she underwent numerous operations, after being unconscious eighty-one days. Although twenty-six of the twenty-eight famous specialists who examined her told her she could never get well, she is now able to walk unaided and is on the road to recovery. She has hopes of returning to the stage in another year.

Chekiang Gains Slightly In Fifty-Hour Battle

connecting Malu and Kiating with Nanziang remain as mute evidence of how critical the situation along this main communication line was at one time.

Chekiang is mourning the loss of an able officer in the death of Col. Wang Shu-ping of the 2nd Regt., [illegible] Mixed Brigade, who was killed at the moment of a local victory. As I heard it, the colonel received orders direct from General Chwang Tse-ping to silence a nest of machine guns which had been and were directing a galling fire on the Chekiang lines.

Two groups of 500 men each set out toward the machine guns. Of the first group, making a frontal attack, 400 were said to be killed and wounded. The remainder took the strong point with the bayonet. The second group arrived soon after and piled into the trenches so recently of Kiangsu, just as some Kiangsu reinforcements were rushed up. From the shelter of the trenches, the Chekiang men decimated the new enemy force. They held the position at the price of their colonel and many comrades.

The Chekiang leaders report that in the vicinity the Kiangsu troops also lost a colonel killed, a man named Wu. Terrific losses among the Kiangsu troops were the result of the two days' attacking, it was said. Many of the Chekiang soldiers said that a large number of green men had been thrown against them, "coolies who did not know how to use a rifle except to waste ammunition."

While nearly 1,000 refugees from Sungkiang reached Shanghai yesterday, the farmers in the Huangtu-Kiating sector who stayed at home are still determined to do so, as the story of a stragic mistake shows.

FARMERS KILL COOLIE

A stretcher famine was caused by the numbers of wounded sent back over Sunday and Monday, so a Red Cross coolie was sent into the country to attempt to locate a worker in bamboo who could make some more stretchers. The countryfolk mistook the coolie's errand for one of obtaining coolies for the army and they beat him to death with the three and four pronged forks used in spading up and hoeing ground.

About 200 wounded were sent down from Nanziang yesterday.

A Kiangsu airplane flew over Nanziang in the forenoon, but did not drop any bombs. It remained very high in the air while in sight. Such visitors have caused out bamboos to be laid on all the tents about Nanziang station, a rather amateurish attempt at camouflage. The station has become more of a supply and troop base than ever, due to several additional track sidings laid within the last week or so.

Control of troops travelling on the railway has tightened and all soldiers travelling alone must explain their errand, show a pass and open for the inspection of an officer of the military police any bundles they may be carrying. The Chekiang army is surprising in the extent it is kept from looting; in travels through villages deserted by farmers who left flocks of chickens and ducks behind I have seen only one litter of freshly plucked feathers. Not many armies could be kept within such bounds.

AWAIT REVIEW OF SENTENCES GIVEN SCOUTS

Philippine Military Circles Keenly Interested In Decision

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Manila, September 17.—Military and civilian circles here are awaiting with interest the decision of the Army Reviewing Board in Washington in the case of the 200 or more Philippine scouts, whose "strike" for more pay at Fort McKinley recently resulted in courtmartial sentences for nearly all of them.

Pending the finding of the Washington authorities, the prisoners have been removed to Corregidor, the Island at the mouth of Manila Bay. It is believed that the Reviewing Board will confirm the sentence of the courtmartial here.

The scout mutiny and other incidents have been disquieting to the military authorities. Up to the present, it was generally felt that the native troops could be relied on in an emergency. This may still be the case, as the soldiers who are now in prison were for the most part ignorant men of the lower class, easily preyed upon by agitators, but giving no trouble of their own accord. The occurrence, however, shows how far the political agitation has been carried.

It is rumored that the white garrison here will be increased in the near future by two regiments of troops from America. Another interesting report which, however, has not yet got beyond the point of mess room gossip is that the American fleet, which is to manoeuver off Honolulu this winter, will visit the Philippines.

JAPANESE TAKEN ON ARMS COUNT WHILE ON BAIL

Man Is Arrested For Second Time Within Week For Possessing Guns

While out on bail awaiting trial in the Japanese Consular Court on charges of trafficking in arms, Y. Shimada, 32 Baikal Road, was taken into custody by police of the Wayside Station Monday on an entirely new charge of being in possession of contraband arms.

Shimada's arrest followed a raid conducted by Inspector Crockdake and Detective Constable Nakamura, in company with an official of the Japanese consulate, on a Japanese restaurant at 25 Boone Road. There nine Mauser pistols in holsters and two empty hostlers were found. Shimada was taken into custody later at his home, and was charged a second time in the Japanese Consular court. He was first taken into custody last Thursday when an arms raid was conducted by Assistant Commissioner of Police M. O. Springfield on a house in the Hongkew district.

Assistant Commissioner of Police Springfield was again active on Monday in trailing down persons in possession of contraband arms, when he headed a police party in a raid on a house at 1271-72 East Seward Road. Seven Mauser pistols in holsters, 100 rounds of Mauser ammunition and 50 rounds of .32 caliber ammunition were seized. Two Chinese women and a man were taken into custody.

SUN MAY MAKE NEW EFFORT TO SEIZE CUSTOMS

Constitutionalist Troops Fall Back On Canton Without Battle

(Eastern News Agency)

Canton, September 29.—Rumor is rife here that Dr. Sun Yat-sen, who is now in Shaokwan, will return here in a day or two and that he will again attempt to carry out the seizure of Customs revenues, which gave rise to an issue last year.

In this connection, it is learned from a well-informed Chinese source that Dr. Sun appears to have given secret instructions to Messrs. Hu Han-min, Liao Chung-kai and Wu Chao-ssu to seize Customs revenues with the understanding that such a step would without doubt lead to serious controversy with the Powers concerned.

The fact remains, however, that Messrs. Hu, Liao, and Wu, taken aback by such an adventurous scheme, are doing everything within their power to dissuade Dr. Sun from the outrageous step, but Dr. Sun is reported to have expressed the view that it would be by far better for him to fail as a sequel to his engendering a diplomatic issue rather than to fail in the battle at the hands of Wu Pei-fu and Chen Chiung-ming, and that unless military funds amounting to $100,000 can be raised within the next three days, he would at once return to Canton and carry out the seizure of Customs revenues.

While it remains problematical whether the foregoing rumor is true, judging from all accounts available, there is reason to believe that it is not entirely without foundation.

Canton, September 29.—The constitutionalist troops, belonging to Dr. Sun's faction, which had been stationed in Sheklung, suddenly made a retreat to Shektan some ten miles from Sheklung. Though the reason is uncertain as yet, it is inferred that the retreat has been made owing to the apprehensions that their retreat might be cut off by General Chen Chiung-ming's troops. The withdrawal of Dr. Sun's troops from Sheklung is being watched with anxiety for it may directly affect peace and order in Canton.

(Eastern News Agency)

Canton, September 29.—The Hunan troops under the command of Generals Sun Hao-keng and Lu Dih-ping, which have been stationed in the region of the East River, are now one after another proceeding to Shaokwan via Canton. It is learned, that inasmuch as the majority of the troops have died of various sorts of sickness as a sequel to the flood that visited the district of the East River last summer, they have now decided to return to their native province taking advantage of the orders given them by Dr. Sun to join the expeditionary forces against the North.

The Yunnan troops, commanded by General Fan Shih-sheng, also intend to return to Yunnan and are now demanding from Dr. Sun the payment of their wages as well as expenses of their journey to Yunnan.

(Eastern News Agency)

Canton, September 29.—Dr. Sun's constitutionalist troops, who retreated to Shektan after [illegible] up Sheklung without [illegible], last night further retreated to Shekpei station on the Kowloon line only five miles from Canton. General which troops have not yet entered Japan Shektan, but the situation here continues graver than ever.

SOVIET-JAPAN CONFERENCE IS BRIGHTER NOW

Delegates Hold Fight Session In Russian Legation At Peking

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, September 29.—The Japanese and Soviet delegates today for the first time held their meetings in the Soviet Embassy (the old Russian Legation). At their morning sitting, Mr. Yoshizawa, the Japanese Minister, made an explanaion in detail about the provision in connectin with the question of Saghalien rights, which the Japanese delegate submitted to the Soviet delegate the day before yesterday with the result that the Soviet delegate has, it is reported, clearly understood Japan's conciliatory attitude. In the course of their afternoon meetings, which were held twice, one from 1.30 p.m. and the other from 5 p.m., the Soviet delegate also amply manifested his spirit of mutual concession and compromise, thereby creating in a large measure the possibility of success of the Soviet-Japanese conference.

Rubber Restriction May Bring Trouble, Is View Of Times

(Reuter's Service)

London, September 29.—Discussing the rubber position, the Times City editor points out that restriction, if drastic enough and continutd long enough, must improve the statistical position and lead to a rise in the price; but consequences must vary with the method. It is not economically sound to eliminate a factor of efficiency by treating all planters alike in the matter of production. In the second place, it is an unsound policy to give foreign rival business an opportunity to secure a larger proportion of trade than it formerly held.

It seems that, in the circumstances, when restriction finally ends, the British industry may find that, although it may have larger reserves in the bank than its neighbors, the Dutch may have a larger area of newly planted rubber, which would give them a bigger proportion of trade than in the pre-restriction era. Such a result would not have occurred if restriction had been brought about solely by the price factor; restriction would then have affected equally British and Dutch interests.

Tennis Shows Big Popular Growth In California

(BY UNITED PRESS)

The California State Tennis Championship tournament last month attracted a big entry list which testifies to the growth of the sport in the state, which development is however typical throughout America, and is a convincing proof of the growth of the sport and the interest being taken in it. Five years ago there were less than one-third the number of competitors that there are now. In other words, the increase has been more than 300 percent. Incidentally, five years ago very little mention was made of junior players at all.

Of the 444 entries in the year's state tournament, 174 of them are juniors. In 1923 there were 131 boys and girls entered in the five events set aside for the younger players. These events are junior singles and doubles for boys under 18, junior singles for girls under 18, boys under 15 singles and girls under 16 singles. The most noticeable increase is among the 15-year-old boys, where the entry list almost doubled itself.

In 1923 twenty-six youngsters lined up for this event, now there are fifty aspiring juveniles for the state title. The girls are more timid about entering competitions while their games are still in the making, but a gain of eight among the sweet-sixteens is about the right proportion to balance the gain among the boys. It has been estimated that there are about eight boy players to one girl.

While we are on the subject of the growth of the game, we must not overlook the San Francisco playgrounds, where in six years the entry list in the annual tournament for the championship of the playgrounds has grown from 250 to 2101.

More and more tennis is coming to the front as a major sport, as it deserves.

Horse Racing As A Sport In The United States

Gaining In Popular Favor; General Absence Of Legal Bookmaking; A Noted Plunger

Horse racing has been gaining in public favor in America in recent years, and the "sport of kings" had one of its very best Augusts at Saratoga Springs this year. It is not, of course, the great game it is in England, this being in large part due to the fact that betting is under a legal ban in most states, and though private wagers are common, and large-scale betting goes on by that means of various devices, the general absence of the open and legal public bookmaking system is undoubtedly a serious handicap.

Everywhere, however, handbooks flourish, and whoever wishes to lay a few dollars on the horses these days finds little difficulty placing the money. But in the main, the wagering aspect of the turf is under the circumstances more or less subordinated to the genuine and pervading sporting interest in the pastime.

Americans, however, really seem to be developing a sincere love for the thoroughbred, and are ready to applaud the gallant efforts of our four-footed friends as they engage daily in tests of speed and stamina on the courses East and West, North and South.

SARATOGA SPRINGS RACES

Racing at Saratoga Springs for the season of 1924 got away on August 1 literally in a blaze of glory. The all-August meeting this year experienced unprecedented success, with distinguished visitors from all parts of the country pouring into the famous New York state resort. The opening day was marked by the splendid victory of My Own, Admiral Cary T. Grayson's four-year-old colt, in the running of the Saratoga Handicap at a mile and a quarter. My Own, which was second choice to Zev for the honor of racing against Papyrus, English Derby winner, last fall, easily took the measure of a first-rate field in the Saratoga. It was his initial start of the year, but his trainer had him at razor edge. Barnes rode the winner, and not too well at that, as My Own was in a pocket coming into the stretch from which he was extricated more by his own dash and speed than by the handling of the boy. Sunsini was second and Aga Khan, an added starter, third. The mile and a quarter was run in 2:05 3-5, which is an example of the good time made in these races.

In general, the racing sales ring shows many newcomers this year, as well as the old-timers at the game, bidding high for possession of royally-bred equine speeders to carry their colors. The public is flocking in droves to the courses, whether at Saratoga Springs, or a Belmont Park, Jamaica, Aqueduct or Empire City, in New York State, and wagering on the chances of the ponies is a current craze.

The betting, however, is not on the large scale that it was twenty years or more ago, in that era of racing that produced the great, spectacular plungers. Nowadays it is a common thing to hear the stands break out in spontaneous cheering for horse and jockey at the finish of a well and truly run race, and this cheer is not always inspired by the fact that the public has cashed a wager on the winner.

AN OLD-TIME PLUNGER

On no track in the country today is there a betting figure of such prowess as the late Pittsburgh Phil, whose exploits in luring their bank-rolls away from bookmakers provided many a story of engrossing human interest.

Pittsburgh Phil, whose right name was George E. Smith, has been dead several years, but his deeds are ever fresh in the minds of veteran racegoers. It was in Riley's big poolroom in Chicago that the name Pittsburgh Phil was bestowed upon him. He was unknown when he bought his first choice in an auction pool, and Riley asked him what his name was.

"Smith," was the answer.

"Owing to the scarcity of Smiths hereabouts, I'll have to ask you where you come from," said the poolroom keeper.

"Pittsburgh," replied Smith.

"Then I'll call you Pittsburgh Phil," declared Riley. "That's your name here, so be sure and don't forget it."

The name stuck to him all through life.

In all of his twenty years of experience on the turf this remarkable plunger never failed to dissect the running of a race through his field glasses. It made no difference whether he had a bet down or not, for he looked into each race with the idea of detecting some future winner. If he noticed that a certain horse was improving he kept tabs on him. He could see whether the horse had good or bad racing luck, whether he was easily ridden or incompetently handled and whether he was "trying" or not.

Everything was stored away in the plunger's mind for future reference, and when the "proper day" rolled around Phil usually had one of his characteristic wagers down, no matter what the price happened to be. But at the same time this particular horse had to warm up well in his preliminary before Phil, sent the checks to the ring, "the longer the price the better," being his habitual motto.

A KEEN OBSERVER

When Pittsburg Phil first became famous as a plunger he did his own "clocking." Watch in hand, he was always out with the railbirds before sunrise watching the work of the horses in their morning gallops with an eye like a hawk's. Nothing escaped him, and many an owner was surprised to find that the plunger knew as much about his horses as the trainer and the stable hands. Pittsburgh Phil seldom turned down a so-called poor owner. They were his friends and he profited by them immensely. If an impecunious horseman had a good thing up his sleeve he invariably hunted up Phil and said:

"I've got a winner in my barn. Will you put a bet down for me?"

"Let me see him work first," was Phil's never-failing reply, and with his split-second timepiece in hand he insisted upon seeing the horse "work" before he would accept the tip. If the horse looked fit and willing to run, Phil would put down a generous bet for the owner in addition to placing a swell wager for himself. This was one of the reasons why he beat so many long shots and won so much more money than those who speculate almost wholly on short-priced favorites and second choices.

Night after night Phil studied the curies for the following day. He was an expert handicapper and also an unusually clever judge of form at a glance. When he had figured on the probable winners on the past performances of the horses and his general idea of what ought to occur, he was not satisfied until he had seen the horses in the paddock before the races, at the same time noting their jockeys and other items of importance in his estimation. In talking of the method of selecting winners the famous plunger said:

"My eye is my inside information. I bet solely upon my judgment of a horse's ability to win a race and his willingness to run. You may call it what you please, but I can say that I know when a horse is physically ready, and is disposed to run kindly. I watch a horse in his races so closely that I can tell at a glance whether he has put on flesh or taken it off since his last public appearance. I note everything that leads up to fitness, and then I bet, the size of my wagers depending on the degree of confidence I possess.

"I never bet on a horse until the last possible moment, because I want to take into careful consideration every element of racing luck that my horse must contend with. Horses are like men. Some days they do not want to race any more than a man wants to work. There are times when they do not feel well and are off their feed, just as men feel rocky and shun the bill of fare. Those are the days when I do not bet on a horse who has impressed me favorably on previous occasions even when he did not show anything spectacular in a race.

"The secret of my betting is nothing more than a close study of past performances, present form and a horse's willingness to run his best in a race. The young man who expects to make a fortune out of the races must have a quick eye, together with a thorough knowledge of the horse's condition."

Phil always asserted that the percentage for or against the bettor would break him in the long run. He argued that a man who accepted 2 to 1 on a horse when 4 to 1 was the proper quotation got the worse of the percentage and the bookmaker the best of it every time.

BOOKMAKERS FIGHT SHY

As this plunger's success continued from year to year the bookmakers fought shy of his money, and many of them did not want it at all. They figured that every time he bet a 10 to 1 shot they were taking chances with their bank rolls, because of the small army of followers who took their cue from Phil and went up and down the line behind him betting on his selections. For this reason Phil found it a difficult matter after a while to get his money down, so he sent it into the ring by friends, who also became known in the course of time.

As a result of this backwardness on the part of the bookmakers to handle Pittsburgh Phil's money, several tricks were resorted to. One day a number of men who looked like hayseeds went into the ring at Brighton Beach and proceeded to bet on a horse that was a 20 to 1 shot. The bookmakers looked upon these rustic individuals as so many "come ons" and they [illegible] their money with marked eagerness. The horse won in a gallop, and there was consternation among the layers when they saw Phil coming down the cashiers' line taking up the money in bundles. Not long afterward Phil wanted to plunge on a horse that had been opened in the first prices at 3 to 5. This price was too short for the phlegmatic plunger, but he said nothing and hurried into the ring with a bunch of yellow backs in his hand. The first bookmaker he encountered had 7 to 5 against the second choice on his slate.

"I'll bet you $200 on that one!" said Phil, placing his finger opposite the name of the second choice on the bookie's slate.

"You're on," cried the bookmaker, and Pittsburgh went down the line betting $100 at a clip. The crowd, which had been waiting for a cue, rushed around the ring taking any price against the second choice the odds against which soon fell to even money. A moment later the original 3 to 5 favorite had receded to even money, too, and several husky young men made their appearance. They bet $500 and $1,000 a clip on the favorite, and the bookies gobbled the money readily, for they were sure that Phil was betting on the other horse, while Shaw, his own jockey, rode the favorite.

But when it came to racing, Shaw's mount won in a gallop, while the second choice ran third. Nearly all the smart men were sure Phil's fingers had been burned, but the plunger merely smiled when the husky young men hurried up to him with $20,000 which had been won by him on the legitimate 3 to 5 shot. He had "burned up" $1,000 on the second choice in order to get even money against the best horse in the race. It was a shrewd trick and worked like a charm.

Pittsburgh Phil always maintained to the end that he never was guilty of a dishonest act. Even when the Jockey Club stewards refused his entries and took away the license of his jockey, Willie Shaw, the plunger insisted that he had been greatly wronged. He offered to give a present of $10,000 to any person who could show proof of wrongdoing, but he was ignored by the turf authorities until they finally decided that he had been punished enough.

Just why his horses were not allowed to race will probably be never known, but after the penalty had been inflicted Phil declared he should have followed out his first principles in refraining from running horses of his own. He was the most successful turf plunger who ever operated on the turf in America.

Boxing Notes

A Correction

In yesterday's "Boxing Notes" in our paper there appeared a typographical error with regard to Bland, the British sailor who is due to meet Cyclone Nevsky next week, a phrase appearing with regard to Bland's "great knowledge of the game." The word "great" should have been "greater." It was not intended to convey the impression that Bland was a great scientific boxer, but simply that his knowledge of the fight game was greater than Nevsky's.

CIVILIANS FLEE FROM MECCA AS WAHABIS COME

Situation Is Critical; Seat Of Government Moved To Jedda

(Reuter's Service)

Cairo, Sept. 29.—Although there is no definite news regarding Mecca, the position is undoubtedly critical. Civilian evacuation has consequently begun. The seat of Government is being transferred to Jedda.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 29.—The fanatical fury of the Wahabi, who are attempting to capture Mecca, is illustrated by Naji el Assil, the representative of King Hussein, who has brought the amended Anglo-Hedjaz Treaty to London for approval.

Interviewed by a representative of Reuter's Agency, Naji el Assil described the operations he had recently witnessed near Ammanford said that the Wahabi would swoop down without warning, they would not take prisoners, or respect sex, but would leave a trail of desolation behind them. He mentioned the case of a septuagenarian and a youth of 19 who travelled on camels for 54 days to participate in the fighting.

Naji el Assil declared that the only deterrent was the employment of British armored cars and aeroplanes; and that, supported by two cars and one aeroplane, one of the leading Sheikhs could immediately take Ib Saud's capital.

Body Of Chinese Woman Found In Pond In Frenchtown

A member of the French Police Department, on September 25 noticed the feet of a human body protruding from the surface of a pond at No. 32, Passage Mei Zeng Li, Rue Lieutenant Petrolt and upon investigating found the body to be that of a Chinese woman. When the body was removed from the pond there was found to be attached to the head by ropes a heavy stone. At the autopsy it was proved beyond question that the woman had first been strangled prior to her body being thrown into the water.

As a result of an investigation conducted in the district by the French Police Department yesterday two Chinese men and two women have been arrested. The investigation is being continued.

London Insurance Firms Troubled By War Situation Here

(Reuter's Service)

London, September 29.—The situation in China, says the Manchester Guardian, continues to perturb underwriters at Lloyds, who recently issued a cancellation of war risks on all contracts that include insurance of goods to, from or between Chinese ports.

The newspaper points out that most insurance covers and open contracts are subject to cancellation at ten days' notice in case of war risk, but only in serious circumstances do underwriters take advantage of clauses permitting the cancellation of contracts, after which underwriters usually agree to cover war risks at mutually agreed rates. Prevailing war risk rates in Chinese ports are one-eighth percent on policies containing the Institute of Underwriters' warehouse to warehouse clause and one percent for thirty days afterwards.

Local Short Story Club Publishes First Volume

A book which is entirely a home product, having been written by Shanghai authors, published and distributed by local book companies, appeared in the book-stores during the week-end. It is a volume of twenty-five short fiction stories, written by members of the Short Story Club. The stories have a Far Eastern setting, and five or more of them have the plots laid in Shanghai.

Bound in blue silk with a clasp, the book presents an attractive appearance, the style of cover being a convenient adaptation of the Chinese method of binding books. Under the title of "Who's Who in the Short Story Club", the biographies of the authors are given in a department at the back of the book. The list includes the names of a number of prominent professional writers and journalists, and club women, missionaries and business men who have made a study of the short story and class themselves as amateur writers.

The Short Story Club was formed one year ago and has a membership limited to thirty. The present volume is the result of a year's work on the part of the organisation. Mr. Verne Dyson is president of the Club and Mrs. J. J. Connell vice-president.

During the year's study of theoretical romance and adventure, some of the real article made its appearance, Miss Elizabeth Lipscomb, the secretary of the Club, was married in June to Mr. Phillip Sullivan at St. John's University as a result of club acquaintances. Miss Lipscomb succeeded Miss Louise Loehr as secretary when Miss Loehr went to Italy.

The story of the founding and development of the Club is given in a light mood by Mr. Dyson in the Foreword of the book of short stories. He says:

"The peoples of various lands who will read this volume will want to know, I am sure, something about the group of artists which has done this interesting thing in far-away China. The forination of the Short Story Club of Shanghai first was broached in a conversation between Drury and myself at the American Club.

"'Why not?' I inquired.

"'Why not?" quoth he.

"The scene changes to the campus of Shanghai College. Four of us are seated on a grassy knoll by the Whangpoo's side. It is twilight and out in mid-stream we see the junks glide by, dim and silent like the ships in a dream.

"'Why not form this Club?' asked I.

"Why not, indeed?" the others responded in unison.

"Several weeks later a larger group of us met on the same green knoll with greater quantities of food and drink. It was at this time, on the evening of July 27, A. D. 1923, that the Club actually was formed and I was elected President. The date is given so that it may go into the calendars.

"After hearty refreshments and the felicitations which characterise such occasions, there was rendered a short literary program. Marguerite Longacre Connell asked and answered the question, 'What is a short story?' The next number on the program was Cliff's history of the art of story-telling, covering a period of six thousand years. The moon having risen now in all its silvery splendor, Malvina Louise Loehr read 'Moonlight' by Gue de Maupassant.

"In the pause that followed, Percy, the chemical-journast, lighted another cigarette, and Ann started to unwrap her bathing suit. I saw that if I made a speech, I'd have to hurry and began:

"If almost any sort of scribbler can come to China, look around for a few days and them go home and write a short story or a long book full of absurdities and sell it to a publisher, why can't we who live here and know the country and its people and see a plot every morning in our daily newspaper, write some short stories for which the publishers and the public will fall, and fall hard." (Applause).

"Why not?" they shouted wildly.

"'I make a motion that we do,' somebody said.

It was duly seconded and carried, and we adjourned from the knoll of inspiration to the bathing pool."

The following are the names of the stories and their authors in the order in which they appear in the book:

"Obedience", by Verne Dyson: "The Philosophy of Wang," by Arthur de C. Sowerby; "Chong Yok and I Outwit the Devil," by Marguerite Longacre Connell; "The Bend in the Road," by A. H. Swan; "Under the Silver Heel." by Harriet Boutel Lacy; "The Ultimate Alibi," by P. L. Bryant; "The Burden of Respectability," by Ruth Benedict; "Servant's Baggage," by Clifford M. Drury; "The Jade Earrings," by Carleton Lacy; "The Broken Table," by Maurice Eldred Votaw; "Mutiny," by Olivia Price; "The Straw Satchel," by Martha E. Pyle; "Louise" by Elizabeth Crum Enders; "Both Sides," by Katharine Scott Umsted; "Goggle-eyed Old Geezer," by Guy C. Stockton; "Judgment Reserved," by Gordon B. Enders; "The Old or the New," by Miriam L. Drury; "The Phoenix," by Betty Graeme Peirce; "The Spirit of the Tiger," Mary Elsie Snoke; "The Lady and the Squaw-man," by Mildred Foster Elliston; "The Silver Pines," by Carroll Lunt; "The Flame Tree," by Maud Hubbard Brown; "The Thousandth Man," by Nigel Van Biene; "Wang Ching's Immortality," by George Robert Loehr; "The Wounded Story," by Gerve Baronti (Mrs. G. A. Bena).

The book was published by the Oriental Press. It is for sale at the various bookstores in Shanghai, price $4.

WOOD TO GIVE IN, IS BELIEF IN PHILIPPINES

Will Let Legislature Have Its Way, Actions Indicate

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Manila, September 17.—Governor General Wood and the legislature have been in disagreement again over the matter of appointments by the Governor to several offices, and the outcome is not yet certain though it seems likely that the Governor will allow the legislature to have its way.

The most recent issue has been the governorship of Oanao, one of the Moro provinces, where the legislature wished to see a Filipino appointed, but where the Moros were insistent on an American. The appointment is still hanging fire, although Governor Wood has withdrawn the name of Major Livingston, of the constabulary, whose selection the Philippine Senate refused to confirm.

The legislature also has apparently bested the Governor in the Alejandrino case, which has been of great interest locally. General Alejandrino was one of the two appointive senators, selected by the Governor. He is a veteran of the revolutions against Spain and the United out of sympathy with the independence agitation, as indeed most of the "Veteranos" are. He received a very sarcastic greeting from the Senate when he took his seat, and the incident culminated in a personal encounter in the hall outside the Senate chamber, General Alejandrino punching another distinguished legislator in the nose. The Senate thereupon suspended General Alejandrino for conduct unbecoming a senator, and deprived him of his salary and all other prerogatives for a year.

The case was taken to the Supreme Court, which a few days ago pronounced the Senate action illegal, but held that it was outside the jurisdiction of the Court to afford a remedy. The decision has been generally criticised by Americans. All the Filipino and two American members of the Court voted for this decision, though two other American justices dissented very strongly. An appeal may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The impression prevails here that while Governor Wood has lost much prestige in native eyes, due to his apparent failure to act strongly in these cases, he is handicapped by the uncertain political situation at home. It is evidently the wish of the Washington administration to avoid any disquieting reports from the Philippines until after the November election. Should Mr. Coolidge be returned as president, it is believed that a stronger line can be taken by the executive here.

But different!
To the point of perfection he carries his portrayal of motherless-manhood, trying—lying—to hold the love of the woman who calls him "Sonny."
It stands among the most human plays and as one of the greatest individual triumphs ever radiated from the screen.

You'll remember this boy who takes a dead buddy's place in a blind mother's heart. Only a dog knows the difference.
Then the longings of a lifetime make him want to be "Sonny" always to the sweet old mother—but he cannot live a lie.
Then, too, he falls in love with the girl supposed to be his own sister.

HOPE IS STILL SEEN FOR LIFE OF IRA SPARKS

Lone Mariner Who Sailed Pacific May Be Alive, Says Gov. Wood

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Manila, September 17.—Ira Sparks, the religious fanatic who was believed lost off the coast of Mindanao, may still be alive, according to Governor General Wood, who has just returned to Manila from an inspection trip in the Southern Philippines.

Sparks's 23 foot sailboat, the Dauntless, in which he, singlehanded, crossed the Pacific from Honolulu, was found ashore on the small island of Agusan recently by constabulary patrols. The constabulary report to Manila stated that it was supposed Sparks had either been drowned or had been killed by hostile Moros.

Governor Wood says, however, that he found bedding evidently used by Sparks in a wooden shack near the place where the Dauntless went ashore. He thought it not unlikely that Sparks had wandered into the wooded fastnesses of the island and was still lost.

Sparks is one of the most romantic figures in the news of the islands. A resident of the small town of Peru, Indiana, he became obsessed with the idea that he should make a pilgrimage to the Holy Land via the Pacific. The first lap of his journey by sea was made in a packing box in which he had concealed himself, and which was taken aboard a liner from California as ordinary freight. He was discovered when the liner was well out to sea, and was landed in Honolulu as a stowaway.

His journey from Honolulu to Davao, made in the face of predictions that he would never reach his destination, was accomplished in ninety days. He sighted no land en route. When he arrived at the town of Tandag, Surigao, Philippines, a sword and shotgun which constituted his sole armament were taken up by the constabulary on the ground that he did not have a firearms license.

After a halt of several days here, he embarked for Singapore, and it was only a few weeks ago that the Dauntless was found ashore on Agusan Island, with her only passenger missing.

Miss Bailey Discourses On Screen As A Career

PREPARE YOURSELF FOR A SCREEN CAREER!

That is the significant and confident challenge of Shanghai's newest arrival—an American training school for motion picture actors and directors. The school is under the direction of Miss Naomi Bailey of Hollywood and is being acclaimed here as the most important and encouraging development thus far in the motion picture field in China.

"What is it all about?", a representative of THE CHINA PRESS yesterday inquired of the charming director of the School. "Has Shanghai actually arrived as a movie center?"

"Shanghai appears to have arrived several years ago", she replied, "but it has failed properly to develop, for reasons which are obvious to anyone familiar with motion picture direction and production. One cannot make pictures without skilled actors, and that is the impossible feat that Shanghai producers have been trying to perform. I am amazed that they have gone as far forward as they have.

"I am not a teacher, but when I came to Shanghai to produce pictures and found here almost no one familiar with the simplest details of screen technique, I concluded that the only hope of producing pictures in the Orient was speedily to train the actors.

"Speed in teaching screen action is a relative team, for one cannot burst upon the screen and succeed. Contrary to popular opinion, the stars at home have not stepped out of a beauty parlor or from a ribbon counter to fame on the silver sheet. The stars in Hollywood today are the stage actors of yesterday-talented men and women who have been in the profession for ten or fifteen years and who are artists in every sense of the word. Shanghai producers have made the mistake heretofore of assuming that an office clerk could put down his pen, put on a moustache and, presto, be an actor.

"While I have no hope of making stars in a few hours, I do believe that competent actors can be developed with careful, patient, demonstrative work and the results here have already warranted that confidence. There are some of the most responsive and intelligent and promising young people in these classes whom I have ever encountered in my professional work and I expect to see them making real pictures before many more weeks or months elapse.

"I find the Chinese easy to direct because they have an almost instinctive appreciation of dramatics and because they approach dramatic work with the receptive eagerness of children. The Chinese are great imitators and all art has its beginning in imitation. I have directed actors of many nationalities and have never found any more easily moulded than the Chinese.

"I have been repeatedly asked whether I intend to change Chinese customs on the screen. Anyone familiar with dramatic art would not ask that question. Instead of interfering with the customs of a nation, the drama always seeks to portray them truthfully and accurately. Customs differ the world over, but the fundamentals of dramatic technique are universally the same. I intend only to teach and to apply in China the accepted technique of the screen.

"With actors trained in the principles of screen technique and with a background of unsurpassed historical and scenic possibilities, I feel that motion pictures in China will achieve a unique beauty.

Peking Fears For Tsingtao But Little Danger Is Seen

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tsingtao, Sept. 25.—Although the Central Government has seen fit to give consideration to Tsingtao's possible danger in the present Chihil-Feugtien conflict and provide for this city's adequate defence, there is little real apprehension felt here and it is the consensus of opinion that the troops that are being sent here from Tsinan and Weihsien are making a needless journey.

General Cheng, Tuli of Shantung, who has just been appointed Chief of the Defence forces of the coasts of Chihli and Shantung, has notified Governor Kao En-hung of his intention of sending troops here to supplement the Peihai Squadron, under command of Admiral Wen Shou-teh. The latter, however, is preparing to invade several harbors in South Manchuria for the purpose of blockading the coast and preventing any of Marshal Chang Tso-lin's merchantmen from making any expedition against Chihli or Shantung.

These troops, it is learned, will be divided among Tsingtao, Chefoo and Lungkow. In preparation for the contingent coming here Governor Kao has ordered the Chinese Middle School to vacate the Tatungchen Barracks, to which the troops will be assigned. The pupils will resume work in the Huichuan Barracks.

It is felt here that barring a crushing defeat of the Government forces, Tsingtao is entirely safe. Tsingtao's strategic importance lies in the fact that it is the terminus of the Kiaochow-Tsinan Railway and the only rail line in this region leading directly into the interior. Control of the railway is of extreme military importance and the precautions taken by Peking and Tsinan show that the Central Government is fully aware of the fact.

The night patrols of the police and gendarmerie have been doubled in size and particular attention is paid to the outlying regions. The Administration is taking every precaution and preparing for any eventuality. A sudden descent upon this port, however, would be next to miraculous. Tsingtao lies on the southern side of the Shantung peninsula, or the side farther removed from Manchuria. Any expedition from the north would entail travelling several hundred miles and it would be next to impossible for any troop movement to cover this distance without previous warning. Besides, such transports would have Admiral Wen's squadron to contend with.

It is admitted that Admiral Wen's warships are antiquated and not very seaworthy; still, they have an undoubted value in patrolling the coast of the province and warding off any thrust from Manchuria.

Marshal Wu Pei-fu's special drill officers arrived here several days ago and are diligently drilling Admiral Wen's marines, who are showing considerable progress. The local regiment makes a smart appearance on parade and is becoming a well-disciplined and well-equipped body of men. The police and gendarmerie have received the benefit of special instruction and form a dependable and useful patrolling force.

Buried Treasure On Babuyanes Islands, Says Correspondent

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Manila, September 17.—The Batanes and Babuyanes Islands, at the extreme north of the Philippine archipelago, have received much publicity of late on account of several volcanic eruptions on the island of Babuyan, and also because of the reported incursions of Japanese fishermen and timber thieves from Formosa.

The islands have been as yet very imperfectly charted. The American coast and Geodetic Survey is now mapping the area.

According to an American correspondent of one of the Manila papers, buried treasure is believed to exist on one of the islands of the group, in a cave the entrance to which is guarded by cobras, who have killed all the Filipino fishermen who were hardy enough to attempt explorations. Whatever the truth of this story, the correspondent vouches for the fact that several brass cannon and a ship's bell from an English man of war, supposed to have been wrecked there in the eighteenth century, are now on one of the islands—the bell being in a chapel there.

Few Planes Survive Tests In Britain

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 29.—Only two airplanes and five biplanes survived the preliminary tests at Lympne for light two-seater aeroplanes. The failures were chiefly due to the necessity for using low-powered engines, owing to the conditions of the competition, the aim of which is to discover a suitable machine for teaching embryo pilots.

Navy 'Y' Takes Care Of American Sailors Ashore

A large tent supported by many poles, the American flag flying above it and over the door the banner of the Navy Y. M. C.A., stands in the roadway between the Riverside Power Plant and the Toyo Cotton Spinning Plant at Yangtszepoo. In the power building and in the Japanese cotton mill rooms under the command of Commander G. N. Reeves, U. S. N., are stationed 300 American sailors from the U. S. flagship Huron. These sailors with rifles and machine guns are guarding all the territory in that part of the Yangtszepoo. The outposts are at five places in roads and fields.

Shortly after war was declared between Kiangsu and Chekiang forces were landed from U. S. destroyers Tracy and Borie and these men were supplied quarters in offices of the Riverside Power Company. Simultaneously 75 U. S. marines, sent here on board destroyers, and 25 sailors from the Hulbert were sent to the waterworks plant on Yangtzepoo Road where mat sheds were built for quarters. These places become complete naval war camps with kitchens, mess rooms, officers quarters and barrack rooms. The marines are in command of Capt. W. P. Richards, U. S. M. C. and the sailors at the waterworks under command of Lieut.-Comdr. F. T. Chew, U. S. N. General Headquarters were established at the Yangtszepoo Fire Station where Commander S. C. Loomis, U. S. N., in command of all the U. S. Navy landed forces was stationed.

All these stations were visited by Executive Secretary Paul Brown and his associates of the Navy Y. M. C. A. on the afternoon of the arrival of the landed forces, taking with them magazines and books supplied by the ladies of the American Woman's Club. The wants of the men were ascertained and on the next day the Navy "Y" supplied the stations with gramaphones and records, more reading matter, checker and chess games and baseballs and gloves for the use of the men when off guard duty. Then for several days the stations were visited and the men of the outposts were supplied with doughnuts and "smokes".

Soon the sailors from the Tracy and Borie were returned to their ships and 300 sailors from the newly arrived Huron took their places at Riverside, occupying large rooms in the Toyo building. The men of the landed force were entirely confined to barracks at that time and there was need of the things that the Navy "Y" could supply them, so branches of the Navy Y. M. C. A. were established at Riverside and at the Waterworks. Canteens and small restaurants began operation, a barber shop was provided at each place, and there were shelves of library books and tables loaded with magazines and other tables for letter writing. Best of all are the many long, comfortable steamer chairs, fifty altogether. These Navy "Y" branch places are decorated with flags and are well lighted and attractive resorts for the men when not on guard duty. All day there are games of "catch" and quoits and boxing is indulged in by navy "pugs". The Navy "Y" gave moving pictures at Riverside last Thursday night and this week there will be pictures there and at the Waterworks for the marines. All the men have leave from camp from one until seven now.

The Szechuen Road Navy "Y" building is a busy place at this time for the sailors from the ships have shore liberty from noon until 10 p.m. Basketball games are played there and on certain nights there are movies.

At present there are in port, stationed from Woosung and the Standard Oil Docks up to the Chinese Bund, 10 U. S. destroyers and the flag ship of the Yangtsze Patrol Force, the Isabel, the U. S. Asiatic flagship Huron and the Black Hawk, Rear Admiral C. B. McVay, U. S. N., is in command of the American naval forces in Shanghai, which total 1,500 men.

Last Sunday there were three fleet religious services on shore. At 10 a.m. Fleet Chaplain T. P. Riddle held church service at the Riverside Navy "Y" tent at which 200 sailors attended. The band of the U. S. S. Huron played several selections. At three o'clock in the afternoon Chaplain Riddle conducted another service for the marines at the Waterworks. At six o'clock the Navy "Y" held a song service for sailors in their gymnasium at which Rev. Carleton Lacy spoke. There was a musical program.

Shanghai people are generously donating reading matter for the men at the camps. The Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company gave the men a case of cigarettes. The Chinese-American Publishing Co. gave the Navy "Y" 50 new library books for the camps. THE CHINA PRESS and the Evening News send daily papers to the stations. The American Woman's Club has been very active in welfare work for the sailors and marines, sending gramaphones and records and hundreds of magazines and has loaned their club library of readable books to the Navy "Y" for the use of the sailors.

There are six U. S. destroyers on the river stationed as follows: Nanking, Sicard and John D. Ford; Chinkiang, Paul Jones; Hankow, Preston, Peary and Pope.

Warn Militarists To Steer Shy Of Japanese Property

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, September 30.—Dealing with the situation in China, the "Jiji," in an editorial today, writes as follows:—

"The present disturbances in China are nothing but a strife between Chinese militarists and it is no concern of Japan which of the opposing forces is right or wrong. Needless to say, Japan should maintain her fair and neutral attitude and observe throughout her policy of non-interference in China's domestic affairs.

"The pledge announced by Marshal Wu Pei-fu that he was determined to use special care so that the status quo in the area adjacent to Japan's territories would be maintained and that he would never take any actions to infringe upon the rights and interests already secured by Japan is what we want to advise the opposing factions strictly to observe.

"We are convinced that they are well aware of the fact that any infringement by them upon our important rights and interests can never be tolerated by the Japanese people, no matter by which party such outrage will be committed.

"Should war-evils be extended to Manchuria, therefore, the belligerents concerned must be prepared to take full responsibility upon themselves for their actions. While Japan strictly observes her policy of non-interference, it is up to China to take great care of herself, taking precautions not to complicate affairs."

To keep your Child under a Glass Dome is an impossibility.

It would however be the only way to protect your children against inhaling dangerous germs. Formamint kills germs which may have gained entry into mouth and throat before they can do any harm. Let the little ones play about freely with friends, if only they suck a Formamint Tablet a few times a day (i.e. when going to school and when coming home).

¶ Formamint protects them against Sore Throat, Influenza, Tonsillitis, Scarlet Fever, Measles and Diphtheria.

Use Formamint yourself too. Do not wait till it is too late and you, or your child, are ill, but avert the danger by starting the use of Formamint to-day.

From Dr. Hopkirk's book "Influenza:"

"In Formamint Tablets we possess the best means of preventing (and curing) infective processes in the mouth and throat, which, if neglected, may lead to serious complications."

Wembley Exhibit Makes For Peace And Progress

Chief Executive Sees In Empire Fair An Effort To Forget War; Believes International Gain Likely

BY LIEUT-GEN. SIR TRAVERS CLARKE, K. C. B., K. C. M. G.

The British Empire Exhibition at Wembley represents the ambition of the British Empire to turn the thought of its people away from memories of the war toward peaceful reconstruction. There were some criticisms of the project in its early stages based on the feeling that it was too vaulting an ambition to attempt to organise this great industrial fair of the empire while the economic wounds of the great war had not been healed. But a beginning had to be made some time with the task of calling back the minds of men to peace. Since the great catastrophe of 1914 the civilised world has been largely occupied with problems of destruction. Ten years was a long time for that to endure. The American people, for their part, from the moment that the armistice was signed set their minds to work in the direction of a settled peace. I know that they do not want that peace to reign on the American continent alone and I hope that they will see in the British Empire Exhibition an ambition to co-operate with their effort and to turn the thoughts of the British Empire also away from the destructive hatreds engendered by war and toward the fruitful tasks of peace.

When I was asked to take the position of Deputy Chairman of the board of the British Empire Exhibition in 1923, and afterward that of Chief Administrator, the principal aim to which I set myself was to make the exhibition completely representative of the empire. I wished to see no gaps. I wished the exhibition to show to the world that the unity which the British Empire had displayed in the tasks of the great war could be displayed with equal unanimity in a task of peace. That aim has been achieved. With one single exception, due to financial stringency, there are represented at Wembley Park every dominion, every colony and every protectorate associated with the British commonwealth of nations. Many Governments, many races, many creeds have joined hands for this enterprise and have given to the world a lesson in a really practical form of internationalism.

But the question has been asked why the exhibition should be exclusively of the British Empire? Does not this exclusiveness in itself carry a hint of national rivalry, national jealousy? I answer emphatically, "No." It is better for the nation itself to work for friendly relations throughout the world than through an international exhibition.

At one of the conventions which have been organised in connection with the educational side of the British Empire Exhibition —organised by a women's international organisation—a speaker put forward the apparent paradox tht the soundest path to good internationalism was for the people of the British Empire to cultivate as strongly as possible the ideals of their own nationalism, and at the same time learn a true spirit of tolerance for the ideals and the national rights of other peoples. The only firm basis for good internationalism is good nationalism. To respect and to believe in your own nation is a citizen's first duty.

That, I take it, is the motive which inspires the world policy which the peoples of the United States are following today; that there is no good way to international peace by great nations abandoning their own ideals and aspirations; and that people should cultivate their own national ideals while they cultivate a sympathy and respect for the ideals of the other peoples.

The British Empire Exhibition frankly aims to encourage a spirit of pride in the past and of confidence for the future in the peoples under the British flag. I hope that one of its results will be a general awakening of all the peoples of the empire to a consciousness that they must develop it with all possible earnestness and industry. The British Empire with its wide territories is held, in a sense, as a trust for the world and no territory of it can safely be left in charge of slothful stewards. If that empire is to be secure in its moral position before the world every part of it must be used to the fullest extent for the advantage of mankind generally. The exhibition has shown the existence of huge undeveloped resources, and has, I think, suggested a close examination into the means by which these resources may be better developed.

I am confident that among the American people there will be no foolish misconception that a more energetic development of the British Empire will be of disadvantage to them. Let me cite one particular example. We are striving at the British Empire Exhibition to impress the lesson that some of the territories of the British Empire could add very greatly to the world's stock of raw cotton. No intelligent American takes the view that that would be of disadvantage to America.

The British Empire Exhibition has had very generous help from American friends. In return we have done our utmost to give them a hearty welcome. If, as a result the two peoples are helped to a better mutual knowledge—and consequently a better friendship—that will be a big item to the credit of Wembley Park.

Head Of Mitsui Trust Discourses On Finances

Pointing out that the Dawes Plan is not likely to bring a direct business re-animation to Japan, Mr. Umekichi Yoneyama, president of the Mitsui Trust Company, Tokio, stated that the future of this plan, aimed at the financial rehabilitation of Europe, is not yet clear but that in any respect it will affect favorably the world's business circles sooner or later.

Mr. Yoneyama, who is deeply interested in the study of a comparison between Japanese and Western financial conditions, went on to state that there is no fore-telling how Japan will be affected by the operation of the Dawes plan.

"Unlike Japan both England and America have so far maintained their financial circles with admirable attitude through financial stress and it is there countries that profit most as a result of the operation of the Dawes plan," he said.

Referring further to the financial re-adjustment Japan is going to adopt and to the proposed reduction of the money rate of the Bank of Japan, he said.

FINANCIAL POLICY IMPORTANT

"One of the most important things to predict the future of Japan's financial circles lies in the country's financial policy. The Kato Administration includes the financial re-adjustment in the list of its important policies and this is much welcomed by the financiers at large. The Government financial re-adjustment must be undertaken at the same with the undertaken at the same time with the re-ajustment of general financial circles. The goood effects of this policy solely depends upon the method of practice.

"Rumors are now persistently circulated here to the effect that the Bank of Japan is going to reduce its money rates but it is questionable whether the bank management will carry out the longpending question at the present juncture. Some political interest is connected with the rumored reduction and this must be taken with reserve. The reduction of the money rate by the Bank of Japan is not at all objectionable but careful study must be expended before carrying it out. A close survey of financial conditions is necessary as preparatory to enforcing the reduction. Once fixed the central banks in America and England do not introduce increases or reduction under ordinary circumstances. Relaxation is observed at present in the present money market and demand for debentures is said to be active. The successive debenture flotation is an outcome of foreign capital which is causing as ephemeral business boom in Japan. This resulted in the brisk demand for debentures. The main object of debenture flotation is intended, however, for the readjustment of business and not alloted for fresh enterprise. Under the circumstances, it is questionable whether the bond market will maintain its prosperity during the months to come.

SHORT-TERM LOAN DEPRESSED

"The short-term loan and per diem rate for loans have depressed now. The prevailing rate of 2.2 sen for per diem discount rate is not considered as "going rate" for the present money market of Japan. In my opinion, the above rate will not keep the present rate lower than the official money rate of the Bank of Japan.

"Suppose even if the Bank of Japan rate is lowered at once, it is unknown whether the general money rates will follow suit. It must be taken into consideration that no reduction in money rate to 4 or 5 percent can be done by the syndicate Banks at present. Judged from the prevailing financial circles, no reduction is thought likely.

"The reduction of the money rate is welcomed if circumstances allow but this important problem must be based on the general financial situation and no individual interest must be connected with the reduction.

"The question of lowering the money rate by the Bank of Japan is to be decided as a result of the situation to be created through the enforcement of the extensive financial program of the Government.

"After all the prospect of Japan's financial circles can be predicted definitely on the completion of the policy of the next fiscal year's budget by the Government."

STABILITY SEEN IN THE AMERICAN MOVIE INDUSTRY

Will Not Be Spectacular, But A Safer Business, Says N. Y. Bank

"From now on the moving pictures will be a less spectacular business but a safer one", is the comment of the National Bank of Commerce in New York in discussing the stabilisation of the motion picture industry in the September issue of Commerce Monthly.

"The motion picture industry is slowly getting out of the class of a game and more in the class of a business," the Bank points out. "The evolution is not yet complete, but to its progress the events of 1922 and 1923 have contributed notably. A setting down process has been taking place during the past two years, resulting in the establishment of three fundamental principles: (1), that production costs cannot be enlarged indefinitely without straining the financial basis of production to the breaking point; (2), that sound financing methods are indispensable for the progress of the industry; and third that public approval and good will are its most valuable assets.

KNEW PUBLIC WOULD PAY

"Until 1923 the motion picture industry was the spoiled child among American industries, spending as lavishly as it pleased on more and more costly productions, knowing that the generous public would foot the bills. This condition was not permanent. Judging by the volume of collections under the Federal tax on admissions to all classes of entertainments, the 12 months ending June 30, 1921 established the record for exadmissions to all classes of entertainments. Undoubtedly, admissions to motion picture theaters formed the larger share of this total, there are so many more picture houses than legitimate theaters in the United States, but it is impossible to segregate returns from any one source.

"Costs of production in this industry, as in others, have risen rapidly in the past few years. Once it was possible to produce an acceptable "feature" picture for a few thousand dollars. Now the average is between $100,000 and $200,000. "Superpictures" which have been exploited in very recent years cost from $700,000 to $1,500,000. Cost does not determine profits, however. Producers have learned that it is possible to earn as large a profit on a good $100,000 picture as on one which costs $200,000.

"Spectacular superproductions of the million-dollar class magnify the risk which the producer runs. They will never be the bread-and-butter earners of the industry. The recovering of such a large investment in production takes a longer time than realizing cost and profits on smaller pictures. For a year or longer the producer must lose interest on his capital which is tied up in the pictures, or pay interest on loans before profits begin.

"In the greater number of cities there is no field for pictures at which maximum admission charges are $2.00 or over; neither the size of the theatres nor the enthusiasm of audiences would support such rates. After several months of showing in the large centers a picture is retired to country-wide circulation and the producers begin to receive returns above his outlay. A million-dollar picture may take from one to two years to bring back its cost. In exceptional cases, a picture may run for several years.

PRODUCERS REAP HARVEST

"In the short life of the motion picture industry, American producers have reaped a golden harvest. Of a possible 90,000 picture theatres in the world, 15,000 are in the United States with a weekly attendance now estimated at 50,000,000 and weekly admission of $10,000,000. Annual rentals paid in the United States are conceded to be larger than rentals paid in all other countries put together. The fat years of the period 1914 to 1920 when wages were rising gave the industry an opportunity which may never be repeated.

"Toward the close of 1923, overproduction, "big pictures" and lack of cost control had brought the industry to a point where its finances were not sufficiently liquid for safety. Drastic measures of retrenchment were enforced by several of the larger companies even to the point of closing the studies for a number of weeks last fall. The desirability of keeping production under the direct supervision of financial departments which are located in the East led to an increase in activity in Eastern studios. California's supremacy is not seriously endangered, however.

"The opinion, from high authority, that the further growth of the industry promises to be greater than that already attained can be accepted only with reservation so far as the American market is concerned. It is undoubtedly true as regards the application of motion pictures to industry, advertising, propaganda, education and research, where only a beginning has been made. Activity in picture production at present is devoted in overwhelming proportion to amusement. In this field the growth of the industry is much nearer the maximum.

"Only gradually is the motion picture business gaining recognition as a proper field for the placing of bank funds. Until the last year or two few companies could secure loans. A western bank in close touch with the industry stated in 1921 that only a few out of nearly a hundred producing concerns in its district were safe risks for bank loans. At present this condition is changing. Bank officers have been invited to join the directorates of larger film companies and the modifying of speculative features in the industry is resulting in a less distrustful attitude on the part of the banks."

AMERICAN SILK ABROAD.

EXPORTS OF MANUFACTURES REACHED $127,000,000 IN LAST TEN YEARS

Exports of silk manufactures, produced in mills in America from imported raw material, amounted to $12,000,000 in the fiscal year just ended, and have totaled $127,000,000 in the last decade. This is shown in a survey of the National City Bank, which points out that it was only in 1910 that exports of the finished product amounted to as much as $1,000,000, and were only $2,316,000 in 1914.

Then it was that the countries which had been supplying the world with silk manufactures—France, Germany, Italy, Great Britain and Japan—became occupied in the war and the foreign demands on silk manufacturers here multiplied. Exports of silk goods grew from $2,316,000 in 1914 to $5,258,000 in 1916, $12,141000 in 1918, $22,555,000 in 1919 and $26,945,000 in 1920.

"Then the silk factories of Europe and the Orient resumed their activities and managed to 'salvage' a part of the business which had passed to the United States, but only a part," says the survey. "for our exports of silk manufactures, which dropped to $10,000,000 in 1922, were approximately $12,000,000 in 1923 and in the closing months of the year were running at a rate of more than $14,000,000 a year.

"Meanwhile the exportation of artificial silk has been developed and has grown from less than $1,000,000 in 1917, the first year of official record, to nearly $6,000,000 in 1924, the exports of artificial silk manufactures since $1,000,000 in 1917, the first year 1917 having aggregated $44,000,000.

"These exports of silk manufactures go to all parts of the world, including, in a limited way, the very countries from which we bought the raw silk—Japan, China, France, Italy and the Near East.

"While this was going on the silk demands of our own population have grown apace, and the value of the output of our silk factories has advanced from $107,000,000 in 1899 to $583,000,000 in 1921, and the capital employed in the industry advanced from $81,000,000 in 1899 to more than $500,000,000 at the present time. The wages paid in the silk factories of the country have advanced from $21,000,000 in 1899 to $113,000,000 in 1921.

The American Flyers Make The Round Trip!

SUNDAY, September 28, was an important day in the realm of aviation in the United States, for that was the great day when the American World Flyers landed on the aviation field at Seattle, having completed the circumnavigation of the globe by air. When the American airmen hopped off from Seattle early in April, they were given six months in which to complete their trip and they just made it inside of the allotted time. Rather we should say that two of them made it clear around the world, for two of the machines were forced to drop out, one in the snow and ice of Alaska and the other in similar atmospheric conditions in the North Atlantic. It is not necessary to reprint the heroic story of this accomplishment in aviation, but it is fitting for America, the country which invented the heavier-than-air machine, to have this honor of being the first nation to send a team of planes around the world.

For those interested in the figures of the accomplishment, we reprint here from a circular of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, the actual record of the trip as originally charted, and barring some slight changes in Alaska and the omission of a stop at Tsingtao, China, the record stands practically as originally plotted in the U. S. Army Air Service office in Washington, D. C. nearly a year ago:

The League Crisis

THE Japanese attitude with reference to the latest endeavors of the League of Nations to formulate a scheme for the prevention of war is to be accepted not so much as dictated by a desire to hinder the work in contemplation, as one to make more definite and certain the provisions to which the members of the League are asked to commit themselves. The criticism which the Japanese delegation, through Mr. Adatchi, expressed refers to the scope of the draft protocol, and it is claimed by them that as it stands at present it fails to make good the gaps in the convention. For example if the delegation's contention is good Article XV provides a loophole of escape from investigation by the League of a matter which may be claimed by one state to be within its internal competence, though it might very well be that the honor and vital interests of another country may be involved. And again Article VII may possibly place an aggrieved state in the position of aggressor, because, in the absence of pacific action in its behalf by the League, it adopts measures in defence of its legitimate interest. This last seems of prime importance as tending to the protection of a state which rejects the Court of International Justice, and penalises a state which asks for an impartial performance of that court's functions.

The two objections raise points which will have to be considered with extreme care before anything in the nature of a settlement can be reached, for it is obvious that if these objections are, in fact, well founded, they strike at the very foundations of the structure it is now sought to create. The first objection appears to be one concerning jurisdiction. If we accept the contention that the idea of the League is to settle all disputes which may arise between nations, it is obvious that it should not remain within the power of any state to escape that jurisdiction by claiming that the dispute is within its own competence. As between that claim and the contention of a state which might be vitally interested, there appears to be an issue of fact which properly ought to be decided by the Court of International Justice, and such a state of affairs ought not to be perpetuated in which a dispute might be removed from the jurisdiction by the ex parte declaration of one of the parties that the issue is one coming within its exclusive competence. This would have the effect of rendering nugatory all the work completed to date and would place the Court in exactly the same position as it was before, namely, as a court of arbitration to which parties might resort with mutual consent.

The objection to Article VII is equally radical. In a dispute between a member of the League and a non-member the jurisdiction of the Court cannot be applied. One party rejects its supremacy, and the one which does not logically should be placed under no disability by observance of rules to which the other does not subscribe. Nor is it entirely conceivable that the full power of the League should be directed against the non-member for failing to submit itself to the decisions of the Court. To do so might in effect tend to create an offensive and defensive alliance amongst members of the League as against non-members, and that does not appear to be in keeping with the principles the establishment of the League seeks to perpetuate.

If then we agree that the provisions of the protocol as they at present stand are open to amendment, this seems to lie rather in a clearer enunciation of the principles now laid down than the adoption of new ones. The Court of International Justice should be empowered to decide what matters come within its jurisdiction, not the Council of the League, for such issues require the exercise of judicial rather than executive functions. If such a view be adopted, together with the rule, that neither the Court nor the League has any power to revise the internal legislation of any State, possibly some ground for an agreement may be reached, but any amendment which gives the Court power to interfere with the constitutional rights of a State will never be passed, and we venture to believe that no member of the League present or prospective would accept any rule which allowed any other member to call into question acts of domestic legislation.

From Rome's shores this host has come:
The land of the svelte Martini.
O, they've azure skies and lots of "i's,"
And the dauntless Mussolini.
A goodly crowd, these southern sons,
Dark of skin, of eye, of hair:
It's easy to guess they'll help in this mess.
So really why should we care?

THE LIMITATIONS OF SCIENCE

Science has done wonders, but it has its limitations.

In the days when Huxley and Tyndall were in their prime, there was a feeling in the air that science was a new omnipotence that was about to solve all problems, cure all social ills, dispel all clouds of superstition, and bring the sunlight of truth and gladness of light upon earth.

The reaction could not fail to come. We have learned that science, too, is human.

The world is under an unpayable debt to the scientific spirit and the scientific method. They have done great things.

But there are other things, and the greatest things of all, that science cannot do.

For, after all, the eye of the scientist sees only appearances. The eye of the microscope, as a recent French essayist has said, is still only an eye, and sees only appearances.

Science recognises only facts. But it is not facts that have the last word in life—it is the relations of human beings to those facts.

So it is always to the "seer," to the poet and prophet, the philosopher and the story-teller, that we must turn for our last adjustment.

When our facts are non-facts, when we base our preachment upon what is not true, of course we go astray. It is science that must lay our foundations, else the house is built on the sand and will not stand.

But science has been overpraised. It has made racing locomotives, huge steamships, telegraphic cables, and telephones. With these we have saved time and money, but we are no nearer the solution of the problem of what we shall do with the spare time we have gained or the excess wealth we have piled up.

Science has brought forth millionaires; it has not brought forth any word to make them a blessing and not a burden to the world.

It has enabled us to carry bodies ten times faster than in the age of Moses; it has not shown how to make the souls in those bodies nobler.

Is the mystery of love any clearer now than it was in the days of Abelard and Heloise?

Is death more understandable to the last mother who lost her baby than it was to Eve, sitting with dead Abel's head in her lap?

Are there modern formulas of friendship more reliable than the instincts of Damon and Pythias?

Can the most learned savant of Harvard or the Sorbonne tell you anything new about how to starve the beast and nourish the angel in you, anything Marcus Aurelius or Paul of Tarsus had not told?

Has the most distinguished professor of sociology given us any new light on how human beings are to live in mutual helpfulness and peace, any light that goes beyond the beams cast by the pure ideals of Jesus of Nazareth?

Let us honor the scientist. He has abolished pests, increased comforts, banished the ghosts of ignorance, and taught us intellectual honesty.

But he has not healed the hurt of the world, and he never can. That takes another type of man.

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

There may, in former centuries,
When every man ate with his knife,
Have been good reasons, If you please,
For frequent fratricidal strife.
Men doubtless waited long for thrills,
And found that life was very tame
Before big trucks roared down the hills,
Upsetting flivvers as they came.

When oxen drew the heavy loads
And men were never warned to wait
While locomotives crossed the roads,
Conveying passengers or freight,
There must have been few chances for
The reckless to get strewn around;
No wonder they went in for war,
And tingled at the bugle's sound.

In days of old, when things were slow
And flights were made by birds alone,
When gas was making nothing go,
And bootleg hootch was still unknown,
Men had to use the sword and gun
To get their thrills and earn sweet praise;
There was no killing then for fun,
No wrecks were strewn in crowded ways.

But now, when tons of thousands die
In sudden smash-ups every week,
There isn't any reason why
Adventure should be far to seek.
Bad liquor takes the bullet's place
In causing men to reel and fall;
There's no good reason why the race
Should still be warlike, none at all!

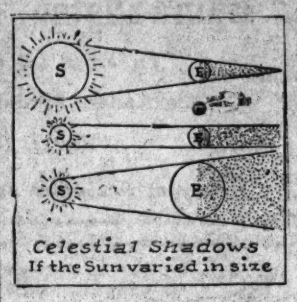
Celestial Shadows Are Wonderful Things

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

You have, no doubt, noticed that your shadow cast by the light of an electric arc, or a lamp, is larger than yourself, and may be gigantic if it falls upon a distant wall. But if you stand out in the sunlight, or the light of the full moon, your shadow is not magnified. The size of the shadow varies with the relative dimensions of the luminous and the opaque object which together produce it.

Shadows are often beautiful, but not more to the eye than to the mind. They are the great teachers of the geometry of nature. Enormous shadows playing through interplanetary and interstellar space, but only noticed by us in particular circumstances, are like supernal measuring rods that span vast abysses in the solar system and in the universal main.

Sometimes the moon is buried in the shadow of the earth, where a lurid glow leaks upon its face through the upper air from the solar conflagration hidden behind the solid globe. But shadows vary also with the distance apart, as well as the relative size, of the objects producing them. When the shadow of the moon falls upon the earth, it is not large enough to bury the earth. It only covers a round spot two or three hundred miles in diameter, which runs like a living thing over the earth's convex surface as the moon speeds across the sun. Only within the track of that moving spot of shadow is the sun totally hidden, or eclipsed, to an observer on the earth.



Celestial Shadows
If the Sun varied in size

The sun is more than 108 times greater in diameter than the earth and about 40 times greater in diameter than the moon. With both at the same distance from the sun, the earth's shadow must be nearly four times as long as the moon's. It is also nearly four times as broad. Roughly, the earth's shadow is 864,000 miles long and that of the moon 232,500 miles.

If the relative sizes of the sun and the earth were varied, some curious results would follow with regard to the shadow. These are illustrated in the picture. The upper view shows things as they actually are, except, of course, that the sizes and distances are not the true ones, since these could not be shown in their real proportion in a small picture. The earth's shadow is a cone, the distance of whose point from the earth evidently depends both the distance between the sun and the earth and the relative sizes of the two.

The center view shows the shadow as it would be if the sun were of the same diameter as the earth. The shadow would be a cylinder with parallel sides, so that instead of coming to an end at a point more or less distant from the earth it would extend onward without limit.

The lower view exhibits the sun. It would be a truncated cone, expanding in proportion to its distance from the earth and with its base retreating to infinity.

All of the stars are vastly larger in diameter than the earth, so that if the light received from any one of them, say, Sirius, were bright enough to cast a perceptible shadow, that shadow would be a cone, like the shadow of the earth produced by the sun, coming to a point at a distance from the earth depending both upon the relative diameters of the star and the earth and upon the distance between them.

Cuffs Assume a New Importance in the New Mode

Whoever it was that invented the large cuff, hit upon a device for making the hands seem small—much smaller than they appear when worn with arms bare. Lately we haven't thought much about the size of our hands. One of the first requirements of the heroines of fiction is no longer to possess hands of fairly-like proportions. In fact some fiction writers even go so far as to endow their heroines with hands that are frankly large. Though of course they take care that the large hand is fairly slender and white. No fiction writer has yet appeared quite brave enough to introduce a heroine with hands that were broad and red!

But to go back to cuffs. They have appeared again on the eastern horizon of fashion. At the late summer collections of the French dressmakers long sleeves and close fitting sleeves have been everywhere mentioned—and with them wide and distinctive cuffs.

During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries such an important role did cuffs play in the costume of both men and women that it is really difficult for a modern designer to think of a kind of cuff that is not at once historical in its suggestions.

Linen or pique either in white or color are among the charming accessories launched by French dressmakers, and an autumn frock that deserves much favor is the straight scant plaid frock with wide washable flaring collars and cuffs. Attach a small artificial flower to the left revers of the collar and the picture is complete.

With printed chiffon frocks for late summer flaring cuffs and collars suggestive of the mode of Louis XIII are shown. Suggestive of Marie de Medici and Marie Louise are all white georgette or lace sleeves worn with long, close-fitting black velvet sleeves. Frilled and flounced sleeves suggestive of the late eighteenth-century mode are seen in the new fashions and close sleeves that button well down on the wrist smack strongly and pleasantly of the Empire period.

Cuffs that resemble the gauntlet top of gloves—snug about the wrist and flaring nearly to the elbow—are attached to some of the new fur coats—the cuffs being of contrasting fur—as mole on caracul.

Pique cuffs with collar to match trim plaid frock. Large flaring cuffs of white chiffon trim printed silk. Trimming for long tight sleeve, white chiffon ruching on black velvet sleeve, cuff trimmed with tiny buttons on grey satin, and flounce to trim black satin sleeve.

OMELETS WITH VARIATIONS

Omelets for dessert are not unusual in France.

And once you have mastered the simple problem of making an omelet you can devise most interesting sweet omelets that are a pleasant change from custards, pies, puddings and cakes.

To make an orange omelet, add a little orange juice and grated orange rind to the egg yolks, with a tablespoon of sugar for every egg. Don't forget the pinch of salt. Fold in the beaten whites, and proceed as for an ordinary omelet, sprinkling with powdered sugar just before serving.

A pineapple omelet may be made by adding a little grated pineapple to a sweet omelet, flavored with little lemon, just before folding.

A little canned strawberries is sometimes added to an omelet flavored with lemon to make a delicious dessert.

Any kind of jelly can be spread over an omelet just before it is folded. It should be sprinkled with sugar before sending to table.

Left-over vegetables can be used up in making omelets, and these are very nice served as an entree to a dinner. Chicken livers chopped fine, mushrooms, oysters, almonds, or asparagus tips are delicious entree omelets.

There are few dishes that are so much admired as Spanish omelet. Best results are gained when chopped onion and green pepper are simmered to begin with. Tomato juice is added, and cooked until it is fairly dry. Chopped olives may also be added. This sauce is poured over the omelet after it is set, before it is turned. One important thing in the making of any omelet is to use sufficient first-class butter for cooking.

FASHION FLASHES

Every young girl who has a sister nowadays looks upon her as a distinct fashion asset, because you know it is quite smart for two sisters to dress alike—or somewhat alike. Recently two fashionable young girls—sisters of course—appeared wearing white linen frocks and poke shaped straw hats of a rather dull old rose. The effect was charming.

MUKDEN TREATY IS DEFENDED BY RUSSIAN ENVOY

M. Karakhan Answers Protest Lodged With Him By Waichiaopu

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Sept. 28.—In response to the protest recently lodged with Mr. Karakhan by the Waichiaopu against the alleged conclusion of the Fengtien-Soviet agreement, the Soviet envoy is reported to have forwarded his reply to the Chinese Government yesterday, in which he is quoted as pointing out that the provision in the Russo-Chinese agreement concluded on May 31 between the Peking Government and Soviet Russia with regard to the Three Eastern Provinces cannot be put in force owing to disapproval on the part of Marshal Chang Tso-lin and avers that the Fengtien-Soviet agreement has been concluded virtually subject to approval by the Waichiaopu.

In conclusion, M. Karakhan says that the Fengtien-Soviet agreement, which serves as a means to prevent the Powers' ambition to encroach upon the Chinese Eastern Railway and also to promote the interests of China and Soviet-Russia, is not only compatible with the spirit of the Russo-Chinese agreement but also tends to cause the said agreement concluded between Peking and Soviet-Russia to be put in force.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Mukden, Sept. 28.—The conclusion of the agreement between the Soviet and Marshal Chang Tso-lin has removed apprehensions regarding possible outlawry by bandits along the Chinese Eastern Railway, and has enabled the Marshal to organise the Seventh and Eighth Armies which with a force composed of five mixed brigades from Kirin and Heilungkiang he has despatched to Chahar in an attempt to turn the Chihli flank at Jehol.

Lighter Type Of Airplanes Tested At Lympne Airdrome

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 27.—Preliminary tests with two-seater aeroplanes of a light type were successfully carried out at the Lympne airdrome yesterday. There were fifteen entries. The Air Ministry is offering prizes to the value of £3,000.

The flying competition proper commences tomorrow. It is hoped that the tests will result in the discovery of a suitable machine for teaching embryo pilots of a cheaper and safer kind than the standard training machines used by the Royal Air Force, and also types suitable for light aeroplane clubs.
